

Name: _____

Having carefully planned your research, you are now ready to collect your information. You will use and develop your skills of thinking and organisation.

First, think of all the different places where you could find information.

Can you add anything to this topic spider showing some of the sources of information that you might use?

Although there are many more sources of information available to you now than in the past, do not underestimate the value of books. If you want to research a general subject, reading a short article in an encyclopaedia can be one of the best ways of making a start.

LOCATING information

Sources of information

Locate resources

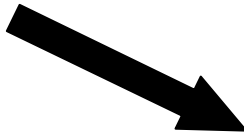

Use the library catalogue

Write your keywords here:

How do I know if this book is of use?

Write where you found the resources here:

Use your keywords – look for them in the index and on the contents page.

Have you found any of your keywords?

No.

Yes!

Look for other resources.

Is the text useful?
Does it help?

No.

Yes!

Write down the title and the author of each resource that you plan to use. You can use this information later, to make your bibliography.